

Aim

The Trust's objective is to provide an above average level of income, income growth and long-term growth of capital through a policy of investing mainly in higher yielding UK FTSE 100 companies.

Risks & Features

Investment trusts are quoted companies listed on the London Stock Exchange. Their share prices are determined by factors including demand, or lack of, which means that the shares may trade below (at a discount to) or above (at a premium to) the underlying net asset value.

Merchants seeks to enhance returns for its shareholders through gearing, in the form of long-term, fixed rate debentures. Gearing can boost the Trust's returns when investments perform well, though losses can be magnified when investments lose value. You should be aware that this Trust may be subject to sudden and large falls in value and you could suffer substantial capital loss.

History

The Trust was incorporated in February 1889, making it the oldest of the investment trusts in the RCM stable. Initially it principally invested in the fixed interest securities of railway companies in the USA, Canada and South America, with the remainder held in Government securities and companies such as Castlemaine Brewery in Western Australia. The Trust now concentrates primarily upon major UK companies with an above average rate of dividend yield.

On 30th June 2006 a further 1,655,941 Ordinary shares were issued following the reconstruction and planned winding up of Allianz Dresdner Income Growth Investment Trust plc. The increase in assets was achieved at no cost to existing shareholders.

Fund Manager's Review

Simon Gergel

In April credit markets eased notably with the latest statistics indicating that leading economies might be beginning to stabilise, even if growth is not yet turning positive. The UK budget underscored the huge deficit facing the Government with a borrowing requirement of close to 13% of GDP.

The FTSE 100 index rose sharply with an 8% gain in the month, though this was dwarfed by the 18% rise in the medium sized companies in the FTSE 250 Index. The portfolio's NAV rose significantly (+12.7% in capital terms). Aviva shares rallied 46% and the engineering businesses GKN and Meggitt also helped performance, gaining 76% and 41% respectively from low levels. Notable transactions included adding the lowly valued electricity generator International Power and increasing the holding in Centrica at a depressed price. We also took advantage of the sharp market recovery to take some money out of Man Group and Dairy Crest which had both performed well.

Whilst the worst of the financial crisis may well be behind us and credit markets are starting to function more normally, there remains a large debt overhang and a shortage of finance generally. This is likely to restrain economic activity and lead to a slow turnaround and a prolonged period of low economic growth. The equity market is attractive on a long-term basis but much of the value is now in the more defensive companies which have participated less in the recent rally. The portfolio is biased to large, strong, global businesses with relatively resilient cashflows and modest valuations.

³A trust's net asset value (NAV) is calculated as available shareholders' funds divided by the number of shares in issue, with shareholders' funds taken to be the net value of all the company's assets after deducting liabilities. In line with current industry best practice NAVs are now shown to take into account the 'fair value' of debt. This means NAVs are calculated after allowing for the valuation of debt at fair value or current market price, rather than at final repayment value. NAVs with debt at market value provide a more realistic impact of the cost of debt, and thus a more realistic discount. It is the capital NAV that is shown, which excludes any income.

Standardised past performance figures comply with the Financial Services Authority's regulations to enable investors to compare different products from different providers.

Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance. You should not make any assumptions on the future on the basis of performance information. The value of an investment and the income from it can fall as well as rise as a result of market fluctuations and you may not get back the amount originally invested.

This investment trust charges 65% of its annual management fee to the capital account and 35% to revenue. This could lead to a higher level of income but capital growth will be constrained as a result. Your capital could also decrease if income paid out of capital exceeds the growth rate of the trust.

RCM Advantage

RCM and its predecessors have been managing investment trusts since 1889, providing investors with access to investment markets around the world through professionally managed portfolios. Each trust benefits from the expertise of the RCM fund managers yet, as a company listed on the London Stock Exchange, it is independent and is overseen by its own Board of Directors.

RCM is the global equity specialist within Allianz Global Investors. With offices strategically located in the US, Europe and Asia, RCM uses its global research platform to search out investment opportunities.
